We Are Buyers on the Pullback AH, Blackwell Revenues Largely on Track

CONCLUSION

We are buyers of NVDA on the pullback following the Q2 print. In our opinion, fundamentals remain intact; however, the stock is off AH on concerns of GM compression paired with guidance not being large enough relative to prior beats. Despite yield issues and a mask change, Blackwell is largely on time and sampling in FY3Q and NVDA is expecting several billion dollars in revenues coming on in Q4. We feel the small delay due to yield and manufacturing issues might have caused a small level of impact to revenue guidance. On gross margin, Blackwell is a complex new product and the company is more focused on speed and volume of output vs a fine tuned supply chain which had been previously outlined by management. We suspect that within 2-3 quarters, GM should stabilize back to the mid-70s. We view this pullback as a buying opportunity. Reiterate OW rating.

• Key Takeaways from the Call:

- Blackwell is set to begin sampling in Q3, production in Q4 and through FY26
- Demand for Hopper also continues to be strong and will grow in 2H
- Spectrum-X rev grew 2x in Q2, exp to be a multi-billion $ product line within a year
- Software is growing at ~100% Y/Y, primarily driven at this time by AI Enterprise
- BoD approved a $50 billion share repurchase authorization
- China DC revenue grew Q/Q in Q2, contribution is still below pre-export control levels

• July Quarter Results Above: For the July quarter, the company delivered results above Street expectations. NVIDIA generated an EPS of $0.68 on revenue of $30 billion, compared to consensus estimates of $0.65 on revenue of $28.7 billion. Gross margin for the quarter was 75.7%, in-line with expectations of 75.6%. Data center revenues of $26.3B were up 16% sequentially and above expectations of $25.2B. This was driven by the adoption of accelerated computing as well as generative AI applications while gaming was up 9% Q/Q. Notably, mgmt again made the statement that inferencing made up 40% of DC revenue over the TTM period. Additionally, networking revenues were up 2x Y/Y and up 16% sequentially driven by adoption of Spectrum-X which doubled Q/Q.

• Estimate Changes: For fiscal 2025, we are forecasting an EPS of $2.77 on revenue of $123.2 billion, versus $2.59 on revenue of $116.30 billion previously. For fiscal 2026, we are now modeling an EPS of $3.69 on revenue of $162.6 billion, compared to $3.42 on revenue of $148.33 billion prior.

- October Quarter Guidance Above Consensus: For the October quarter, NVIDIA expects revenue to be roughly $32.5 billion at the midpoint, above the Street's expectations of $31.7 billion. As we move into the third fiscal quarter, management expects strong growth driven by continued data center strength throughout the rest of the year with tailwinds coming from both gen AI and accelerated computing. Management reaffirmed that supply continues to grow to meet the outsized demand however demand will continue to outstrip supply into next year for the new Blackwell products. Gross margins are expected to be 75%. FY margins are expected to remain in the mid-70s% range.
- Valuation: At a market price of $125.61, NVIDIA trades at 34.0x our fiscal 2026 (CY25) non-GAAP EPS estimate of $3.69. NVIDIA trades above its peer group, which trades at 24.4x. Our $140 price target is based on a ~38x P/E multiple (previously 41x) of our fiscal 2026 EPS estimate. Our slightly decreased multiple reflects peer multiple contraction. We reiterate our Overweight rating.

As always, an investor's decision to buy or sell a security must depend on individual circumstances, including existing holdings, time horizons and risk tolerance. Piper Sandler sales and trading personnel may provide written or oral commentary, trade ideas, or other information about a particular stock to clients or internal trading desks reflecting different opinions than those expressed by the research analyst. In addition, Piper Sandler offers technical research products that are based on different methodologies, may contradict the opinions contained in fundamental research reports, and could impact the price of the subject security.
