Buy The Aftermarket Pullback; Key Indicators Are Bullish

Summary Thoughts

We reiterate Buy after the aftermarket pullback in the stock as NVDA's purchase commitments and supply obligations - the most important metric we watch, and historically a harbinger of future growth - grew significantly for the first time in several Qs. FQ3 guidance of ~$32.5B was maybe a touch below investor expectations and the implied FQ4 (Jan) gross margin is down a few 100bps Q/Q, but this is not only missing the forest for the trees, but also wholly consistent with what NVDA was suggesting last call as Blackwell will have lower margins out of the gate given its complexity. The setup here was also a little complicated because NVDA set what we long considered \(here, here, and here\) to be an unrealistic Blackwell shipment timeline on its last earnings call. With this all finally rightsized, the most important takeaway from this call is the ~$10B (~40% Q/Q) increase in what we consider to be NVDA's aggregate supply after having been flat in FQ4 and up only 15% last Q (see Figure 2). We believe this foreshadows very strong revenue growth over the next few Qs - starting with FQ1 (Jan) as Blackwell will layer on top of Hopper (which based on our supply chain checks will be up Q/Q even as Blackwell starts to ship). We are also not worried about gross margin and see data center margins being fairly consistent across the Blackwell cycle as during the Hopper cycle. Lastly, we believe it is still too early to start discounting a peak as major CSPs are still indicating to us demand upside and lengthening duration of capacity commitments from their customers - none of which suggests we are close yet to things rolling over. Net, we make slight changes to our model but C2025/2026e EPS remains unchanged at $4.87/$5.67, PT remains $150, and we maintain Buy.

Analysis/Key Highlights

- Jul Q Revenue of ~$30B was nearly spot in-line w/our estimate, but ~$1.5B above Street due almost entirely to data center. DC Compute and Networking both grew quite similarly at +17% and +16% Y/Y respectively. Gaming also beat (up 9% Q/Q) while the remaining segments were relatively in-line. GM was consistent with guidance while OM and EPS were in line with our ests and moderately above Cons.
- NVDA traded down in immediate post-market trading related in part to somewhat frothy expectations around where guidance would land and what we long considered be unrealistic expectations the company had set 3mos ago around the timing for Blackwell volume shipments and how much revenue it would see this year. While Oct Q revenue was guided to $32.5B - above our and street estimates for $31.7B - this was a touch below the ~$33-34B that we heard from many investors.

- Gross margin of 75.7% was ~20bps above guidance and NVDA also reiterated that Oct Q gross margin drifts back to 75% with full year in the mid 70%s - also wholly consistent with what it said last call. This does imply a downtick of a few 100bps in FQ4 (Jan) but again the company has been front footed for some time on Blackwell initially being dilutive to margins (but has also told us to expect margins to recover and be generally similar across the entirety of the Blackwell cycle to where Hopper margins were e.g., data center gross margin of ~80-81% versus implied ~74-75% for the first Q out of the gate for Blackwell).
- The company increased full-year opex from mid 40%s growth to high 40%s growth - typically a bullish sign for future revenue visibility.
- In our view arguably the most bullish sign of the print was ~$10B increase in what we consider to be its total supply ($6.7B BS inventory + $27.8B purchase commitments). This was up ~40% Q/Q after growth in this number had slowed considerably the past few Qs and was up only 15% last Q after having been flat in FQ4. When comparing this to NVDA's revenue guidance, we can see that the ratio of supply to revenue guidance ticked up significantly (see NVDA "Supply" as % of next Q Revs in Figure 2) - which in the past has been a solid leading indicator for future revenue growth.
- "Ethernet for AI" revenue doubled Q/Q and management noted "Spectrum-X is well on track to being a multibillion dollar product line within a year".
- Software, SaaS, and support will approach a $2B annual run rate exiting this year up from ~$1B run rate the last time the company cited a number. While still small, this is a key driver to open up new hardware markets and we have previously suggested that we can easily see several $10Bs of such recurring revenue in the not too distant future.
- Blackwell was "widely sampling" in Q2. Regarding the continued debate about timing of meaningful Blackwell revenue, we note that the company added language to the 10-Q this quarter indicating that "in the fourth quarter of fiscal year 2025, we expect to ship several billion dollars in Blackwell revenue".
- Ahead of Blackwell production units shipping in FQ4, we see Hopper volumes continuing to climb as demand remains robust, eventually peaking in FQ4. H200 shipments should remain elevated into F1H during the initial phases of the Blackwell ramp, before Blackwell volumes surpass Hopper to comprise the majority of the unit mix by mid-FY26 (see Figure 4).
- CSPs in aggregate represented ~45% of DC revenue, in line with last quarter's mid-40s and down vs Jan Q's >50%, while consumer internet was very strong at nearly 50% of total revenue. While NVDA's 10-Q customer disclosures have become somewhat more opaque, revenue does show signs of some broadening as there were four key direct customers (which may be distributors/ODMs/OEMs) that were >10% with the largest being 14%. This compares to two last quarter.
- Revenue from sovereign customers and applications continues to grow significantly with the company now suggesting low double-digit $B of revenue this year (or already ~10% of revenue) up from high single digit $Bs last Q. While we do see strong demand from these applications it does seem that NVDA is allocating more supply to these customers to seed these markets which is the reason why the number is up so much in a market where demand is still so strong.
- China revenue was up nearly 50% Q/Q and grew more than $1B, most of which to us seems related to H20 - which we expect to continue growing from here. We do not see the US Dept of Commerce changing the rules again to ban this SKU as there are offerings from domestic China sources that are now competitive with where H20 has to sit to fit under the export control limit. Given the progress of domestic offerings from Huawei and others, we do not see the US wanting to further constrain NVDA's ability to compete in China.
- Free cash flow came in at ~$13.5B (~45% of revenue), with 53% returned via a $7.2B share buyback (and $3.6B so far in August). NVDA's Board approved an additional $50B of share repo (on top of $7.5B previously outstanding). Our FCF estimates suggest as much as $10B/Q (or even more) of share repo could be comfortably supported in the coming quarters.

Read Across

NVDA is quickly gaining traction with its "Ethernet for AI" product offerings (mgmt mentioned "hundreds of customers"), encroaching on a market where AVGO has historically been dominant. Commentary on improving demand in Gaming reads favorably for AMD, though not necessarily for the Semi Custom business where the console cycle remains a headwind.

Valuation: PT $150 (unchanged)

Our $150 price target (unchanged) is based on ~28x P/E (unchanged) applied to average CY25/CY26E EPS of $5.27 (unchanged). See the back of this report for details.

Note: We measure NVDA supply by adding (1) BS inventory together with (2) inventory purchase and LT supply commits – the aggregate of this increased ~$9.8B to ~$34.5B. The ratio between this supply base and revenue has been a solid indicator for future revenue growth. When comparing supply to quarterly revenue, we estimate that with no additional increases in supply NVDA can support revenue of ~$43B/Q.

Company Description

NVIDIA Corp. designs and manufactures graphics processing units, add-in boards, and related low-level software. Its Graphics Processing Unit segment includes GeForce for high-end video games and professional graphics workstations; Quadro for designers; DGX and Tesla Accelerator cards for data center and AI scientists; and GRID for cloud-based visual computing users. The Tegra Processors segment provides processors that enable embedded computer vision applications in automotive video surveillance end markets, as well as delivering multimedia experiences on mobile gaming platforms, while consuming minimal power.

Valuation Method and Risk Statement

NVDA: Our price target is based on applying a P/E multiple. NVIDIA company-specific risks include: 1) competition from AMD in graphics processors (GPUs) and professional visualization products, which historically have driven the bulk of the company's gross profit, 2) intense competition in ARM-based applications processors, where rivals seek to leapfrog NVIDIA's early lead in dual-core technology, 3) emerging competition from Intel with its many-integrated core (MIC) processor family vs. the company's professional GPU computing products, where Intel's approach could be more flexible and easier to develop software. In addition, NVIDIA faces the semiconductor sector risk where revenue trends have historically been linked to corporate profitability, which could be challenged for robust growth, as the economic recovery has been more subdued vs. prior deep downturns.

4:Percentage of companies within the Short-Term rating category for which investment banking (IB) services were provided within the past 12 months.

KEY DEFINITIONS: Forecast Stock Return (FSR) is defined as expected percentage price appreciation plus gross dividend yield over the next 12 months. In some cases, this yield may be based on accrued dividends. Market Return Assumption (MRA) is defined as the one-year local market interest rate plus 5% (a proxy for, and not a forecast of, the equity risk premium). Under Review (UR) Stocks may be flagged as UR by the analyst, indicating that the stock's price target and/or rating are subject to possible change in the near term, usually in response to an event that may affect the investment case or valuation. Short-Term Ratings reflect the expected near-term (up to three months) performance of the stock and do not reflect any change in the fundamental view or investment case. Equity Price Targets have an investment horizon of 12 months.

EXCEPTIONS AND SPECIAL CASES: UK and European Investment Fund ratings and definitions are: Buy: Positive on factors such as structure, management, performance record, discount; Neutral: Neutral on factors such as structure, management, performance record, discount; Sell: Negative on factors such as structure, management, performance record, discount. Core Banding Exceptions (CBE): Exceptions to the standard +/-6% bands may be granted by the Investment Review Committee (IRC). Factors considered by the IRC include the stock's volatility and the credit spread of the respective company's debt. As a result, stocks deemed to be very high or low risk may be subject to higher or lower bands as they relate to the rating. When such exceptions apply, they will be identified in the Company Disclosures table in the relevant research piece.

Investing in structured investments involves significant risks. For a detailed discussion of the risks involved in investing in any particular structured investment, you must read the relevant offering materials for that investment. Structured investments are unsecured obligations of a particular issuer with returns linked to the performance of an underlying asset. Depending on the terms of the investment, investors could lose all or a substantial portion of their investment based on the performance of the underlying asset. Investors could also lose their entire investment if the issuer becomes insolvent. UBS does not guarantee in any way the obligations or the financial condition of any issuer or the accuracy of any financial information provided by any issuer. Structured investments are not traditional investments and investing in a structured investment is not equivalent to investing directly in the underlying asset. Structured investments may have limited or no liquidity, and investors should be prepared to hold their investment to maturity. The return of structured investments may be limited by a maximum gain, participation rate or other feature. Structured investments may include call features and, if a structured investment is called early, investors would not earn any further return and may not be able to reinvest in similar investments with similar terms. Structured investments include costs and fees which are generally embedded in the price of the investment. The tax treatment of a structured investment may be complex and may differ from a direct investment in the underlying asset. UBS and its employees do not provide tax advice. Investors should consult their own tax advisor about their own tax situation before investing in any securities.

Important Information About Sustainable Investing Strategies: Sustainable investing strategies aim to consider and incorporate environmental, social and governance (ESG) factors into investment process and portfolio construction. Strategies across geographies approach ESG analysis and incorporate the findings in a variety of ways. Incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may inhibit the portfolio manager's ability to participate in certain investment opportunities that otherwise would be consistent with its investment objective and other principal investment strategies. The returns on a portfolio incorporating ESG factors or Sustainable Investing considerations may be lower or higher than portfolios where ESG factors, exclusions, or other sustainability issues are not considered by the portfolio manager, and the investment opportunities available to such portfolios may differ.
